Yes you should be held accountable for your friends actions. It's your account, you're 100% responsible for whatever happens on that account. If anything against the rules happens on that account, the account will be punished and you're responsible for it. But I don't know who you actually are, because you either aren't actually banned, or 1coollevi isn't your Minecraft username

I typed /rules just to make sure it was on there but it didnt say anything against grieffing so I did it anyways. It was my first infraction so if you decide to give me a second chance a promise it woun't happen agian. And my minecraft username is 1coollevi

There is a big rules board at spawn, and also a thread here with a more in-depth set of rules. You should probably look more into things

So, it wasn't your friends? So... you lied?

Usually a liar can be caught before a single legged.

I invited Haydenterry to the minecraft server and chifilly got him baned because he found diamond. I am Pissed off. Chiffily accused him of Xraying, He never x rays we both agree it ruins the game for everyone else to do something like that.

I love how you spell my name 2 different ways in the same sentence. But, I didn't ban him &quot;because he found diamonds&quot; I banned him because he X-Rayed to diamonds, and it was blatantly obvious, so don't just say &quot;he just happened to find them&quot;. Nobody gets banned for no reason. And next time, if you want to make a &quot;ban appeal&quot; don't post a stupid message in someone elses topic, and instead get the actual person to come and talk for themselves in a new topic in
