A process that may benefit the MC Server was setup by VooDoo on Daniel's old MC server a long time ago, I'm sure you know what i'm referring too, Ross?

Well yes, just for those who don't know, there was another server I was co-owner of for a few months (until that actual owner just got bored and closed it down 🤔) and I set up a plugin on the server called "WordRank", basically gives people "Player Permissions" when a certain code is typed in chat, and I also set up a page on the forums called "get build rights" and that page would entitle a quiz of all the rules and you had to answer ALL of the questions correct in order for it to give you the code, the only downfall to using this method is that once one person found out the code, they can tell their friends the code and they all become members, a way to counteract that (the method we used) was to change the code manually every 4-7 days, this was only a 2 minute job, open the server files, change the code, open the web page editor, update the code there..

So, this was a good way to make sure everyone knew the rules and even if the people did tell their friends the code, if they got banned, it was their own fault for not paying attention to the rules..

Also, it means that you can go for a strict administrative policy because you were ENSURED that EVERYONE knew the rules, they had no excuse not to.. so you can ban them without warning of the rules..

Tunes attempted to add a similar system to the TWK Server, I don't know what happened but tunes decided to go with a different plugin that automatically makes you TWK-R after (I think) 1 hour of GAMEPLAY (not 1 hour after joining, but ACTUAL connection time), this plugin glitched out and messed up some of the server quite badly.. since then nothing has been added to solve the permissions problems.. although adding a plugin like this to the server would be a great option, tunes doesn't seem to have the time, this could be solved by finding someone else with a bit more time and giving access to the server files (although im not sure tunes would feel happy trusting someone with something that took so much time and effort for him to create).

Also i think that we could do with a few more WEBSITE ADMINISTRATORS, this way we can get rid of the spam posts and topics from the irritating kids that post random junk on the forums.

Just a few suggestions...

Thanks

Automatically getting rights and membership is half of the problem in the first place hmm, dont think people from minecraft should have to apply the same way as people from css. Things work a little differently on mc and it would result in nobody joining the server. The reg system that was on daniels server was simply awesome, if we could get that working things would work a whole lot smoother 🤔

It all requires work and time that few of us have 🤔

Also agree with voodoo, more web admins would probably help things.

And space, if people are bothering you just threaten to mute them 🤔
. Your too nice on these kids

I know I am still new to the community, but I am able to help out and spare some time to help improve things as all i kept reading is that no-one has the time to do anything any more 🤔

I don't have much time on my hands myself (only just got back from work and lots of things to do) but I'd be more than happy to take up a role as forum admin/mod, and would be happy to help admin the MC servers like I did/will do again on the css servers. They won't be getting away with stuff when I'm around! 🤔

Gimp it's a bit different yes but they still need to be encouraged to join the forums to get rights. If they aren't an active member of the community, then they shouldn't get the same rights as those who aim to help the community grow once again

The main factor on MC is kids grieving and then hurling abuse at each other. If we disable TNT and keep the territory thing in, then that solves that problem as you would only be able to grief your own base that way. If someone wants to dig a massive hole then they will just need to do it by hand.

Ami what's this about rl grief!? Tell me who and I'll come smack em one! (Oh and tell DS that my dad stood up the other day! That should get both of your moods up a tiny bit)

I too have the time to spend on improving things and trying my best to help in any way.. I just don't have the abilities to do any decent improvements.
