

Players are getting pretty rule resistant...

Posted by iMattR - 17 Jul 2012 14:48

I love the TWK Minecraft (MMO) server and it has a great community... for the most-part. Generally, one thing I'm talking about is the fact that players keep speaking non-English in chat. It's not really a huge thing, but it's pretty annoying considering there is a sign at spawn and people constantly saying it. Some screenshots below:

I'll mute those who broke the rules for sometime, thanks for reporting and yeah people on the server don't learn untill they get punished 🙄

I honestly think finnpaul has had enough warnings, and needs to have more than a mute in my opinion

Well, if we were directing at players, I could give you a few names 🙄
But I'm just generally talking about the general ignorance of a lot of players.

I have told emanuel SO many times i have lost count. I REALLY dont like the fact that not only does he ignore the rules, but he also told someone to "fuck off"; off for picking him up.

Kinda related to this topic; why dont we look into getting mcbans. might help with checking on the new players and keeping the server more compliant.

so, might be something to look into tunes xD

I agree with Steve - I use MCBans on my server, and it helps me catch out a lot people due to the fact when they sign on (for people with the permission) it gives you all of their previous [global] bans and reasons for said ban.

Definitely worth looking into so we can prevent people being idiots sooner, rather than later. 😊

Been onl for some times here, and ppl just getting ignorant lol. And yea, the continously telling them to speak english is getting annoying as well. I think that the MCBans thingy there could be a good option 😊

I think the easiest solution would be to crack down on rule breakers now, make the punishments harsh, make the line between rule breaking and not rule breaking KNOWN.. that way they know not to cross the boundaries and know not to mess the users/staff about.

The solution is just mute them first and second warning is a 3 days mute last warning is a perm because we keep telling over and over to the same people to speak english.
