

Sky.. why oh why...

Posted by Scathe - 12 Aug 2011 10:32

Anyone a sky engineer or tech guy? If so meet me at mine so I can shove something where the sun doesnt shine...

So... Here is informing you guys that im not going to be about much for a while by the looks of things...

I was changing over phonenumber from BT to SKYTALK on the 10th, was told it would take a max of four hours. Line went down first thing that morning, and basically after a ridiculous amount of phonecalls and arguments the line is still down. They say the line is fine their end... and are now sending an engineer to me "only after saying im going elsewhere again",. The guy wont be here until Monday however which I think is a freaking joke to be honest, having already been without it for a few days.

All in all very annoyed and frustrated with the whole ordeal and wish i'd never have bothered in the first place, as I know there is no fault my end as it was working perfectly with BT so this engineer coming out to test things at my property is a complete waste of time imo.

More than likely I wont be about properly for quite sometime anyways so just letting you all know.

If anyone actually has contacts their that can kick their asses into gear I would really appreciate that! Hours and hours spent on phonecalls over the last few days getting nowhere is ridiculous...

I will be about occasionally when im at work on steamchat if you wanna catch up.

Bye for now

Scathe

=====

Re: Sky.. why oh why...

Posted by substick - 12 Aug 2011 11:00

Noes scathe now I catch own you on the wcs 😊

=====

Re: Sky.. why oh why...

Posted by TheBlackWaltz - 12 Aug 2011 12:33

Waltz looks in to the future and says

The problem will be at the exchange (which requires a BT engineer) as sky aren't allowed to touch them.

Or if its anything like virgin that sky engineer will actually be a BT open reach engineer

=====

Re: Sky.. why oh why...

Posted by NEZ - 12 Aug 2011 13:35

😊

=====

Re: Sky.. why oh why...

Posted by colin1uk - 12 Aug 2011 15:22

ouch bad news m8 , hope it gets sorted soon. 😊

=====

Re: Sky.. why oh why...

Posted by Chifilly - 12 Aug 2011 16:47

I recommend going to Virgin Broadband. We've never had any problems with them, and we've been with them when they were Diamond Cable and NTL 😊

=====

Re: Sky.. why oh why...

Posted by substick - 12 Aug 2011 20:46

Scathe I know you wanted to kill me but you didn't have to kill my internet to kill me xD jk but you have managed to transfer your bad internet to me and now I am constantly at 500 latency and I can hardly move 😞

=====

Re: Sky.. why oh why...

Posted by Scathe - 13 Aug 2011 00:04

Thanks guys!

Lol... Substick you joker, having some net is better than no net though :p

=====

Re: Sky.. why oh why...

Posted by substick - 13 Aug 2011 08:37

Haha 😄
Suppose so 😄
But its better now 😄
hope yours gets fixed soon I need to kill you again 😄

=====

Re: Sky.. why oh why...

Posted by Scathe - 15 Aug 2011 11:18

Hi guys,

Well im finally back up and running... got fixed this morning, couple of hic ups to start with but seems to be stable (ish) now 😄

Time for some css!