

Eli Stone

Posted by Johannicus - 07 Jun 2009 22:10

---

Season 2 just started here in Sweden, just saw E1 and it looks promising. Loved S1, one of the few TV series I actually followed each week. Dont usually do that since I hate commercial interruptions..

Anyone seen this serie? Disliked or liked it? No season 2 spoilers!!

=====

Re: Eli Stone

Posted by eskimo - 09 Jun 2009 17:32

---

VoGon wrote:

then Prison Break that had one of the most amazing S1 but then again, second one was bad, third was ok and 4th too but nothing to do with the first concept and series (the tattoos that have the prison map and the actual breakout), so should have ended on the first...

well you say they were bad but you still watched 3 seasons of it (excluding the good series) when you could of not watched them, then they would have to do something amazing to restore your faith or end it....

yes money does speak louder.....

=====

Re: Eli Stone

Posted by liger - 09 Jun 2009 19:04

---

im more and more convinced that if ua re looking for a GREAT story u should be looking into anime. Not as rule but general observation.

that and all movies made by tarantino and guy ritchie.

=====

Re: Eli Stone

Posted by Johannicus - 09 Jun 2009 19:54

---

liger wrote:

im more and more convinced that if ua re looking for a GREAT story u should be looking into anime. Not as rule but general observation.

that and all movies made by tarantino and guy ritchie.

HAHA! Tarantinos movies aint got that much of a story...

I would say James Cameron and Ridley Scotts movies has hell of a more story 😊

And when it comes to anime it always depends on what age they are going for..

But good story is not limited to anime, most asian movies/series has good story, especially if they are in the horror or thriller ones..but it all comes down to your personal taste. I dislike gore horrors so i prefere asian horror where the sound guy does his job!!

=====

Re: Eli Stone

Posted by Che ken - 09 Jun 2009 20:06

---

liger wrote:

im more and more convinced that if ua re looking for a GREAT story u should be looking into anime. Not as rule but general observation.

that and all movies made by tarantino and guy ritchie.

Anime ftw! 😊

Ghibli is the best, with famous anime director Hayao Miyazaki and recently his son (forgotten his name)

Johannicus wrote:

And when it comes to anime it always depends on what age they are going for..

Well Ghibli covers a huge range of ages from their films, weather it be more younger children (My neighbour Totoro), teens (Princess Mononoke), or older people (Grave of the Fireflies)

=====

Re: Eli Stone

Posted by liger - 10 Jun 2009 01:53

---

Johannicus wrote:

liger wrote:

im more and more convinced that if ua re looking for a GREAT story u should be looking into anime. Not as rule but general observation.

that and all movies made by tarantino and guy ritchie.

HAHA! Tarantinos movies aint got that much of a story...

I would say James Cameron and Ridley Scotts movies has hell of a more story 😊

And when it comes to anime it always depends on what age they are going for..

But good story is not limited to anime, most asian movies/series has good story, especially if they are in the horror or thriller ones..but it all comes down to your personal taste. I dislike gore horrors so i prefere asian horror where the sound guy does his job!!

scott yes has good movies (no, gladiator is NOT some exceptional story. Its mediocre, story-wise) james cameron?? huh??

=====