

Three films...

Posted by DreamState - 17 Jan 2010 10:39

Figured I'd get some more film chat going by highlighting some films I've seen recently and my opinions.

Grizzly Man:

Watched this recently. One of the more bizarre films I've seen (Casshern probably gets most bizarre of recent), but totally mesmerising look into the life, philosophy and psychology of a man who is completely nuts. Without giving too much away, it's about a man called Timothy Treadwell who spent 13 summers living with Grizzly bears and recording footage, before being eaten by said bears.....

Absolutely worth watching.

en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Grizzly_Man onclick="window.open(this.href);return false;

District 9:

I love sci-fi in all its forms and I got this on blu-ray to watch and ... gutted I paid for it. Fairly interesting premise, but I've seen too many of the docu-style things now (Trailer Park Boys is still my all time favourite of these!) and I found it a boring film, with not much plot and fairly predictable. I liked it's reflection of periods of our own history I guess, but that was about it.

Avatar:

Finally, finally got to see this. In 3D - bit of a mix up meant we watched it subtitled (I misread the word 'suitable' 😊), but they were also in 3D also and actually emphasised little parts of the plot. Quite long and fairly predictable but this is not to its detriment imho. An utterly amazing film, enhanced by the 3D in such a sublime way. I felt this film is the first in a long time to step the mark up in film-making. I felt that with The Matrix. If you've not seen Avatar, you really, really should.

=====

Re: Three films...

Posted by liger - 23 Jan 2010 01:30

the only thing i missed was NEO, fighting them all in drunken fighting style

=====

Re: Three films...

Posted by DreamState - 24 Jan 2010 20:50

Jack Frost wrote:

Liger m8, that is absolute genius!!! 🤔

Cheers mate for lending me this film.

Amazing film - loved every minute of it. So much going on, on so many levels.

Pure brilliance and some amazing acting 🤔

=====

Re: Three films...

Posted by liger - 25 Jan 2010 20:23

The goods, live hard, sell hard

Liked it - 7,5-8/10

=====