

WTF!

Posted by eskimo - 03 Feb 2011 21:50

my PC keeps shutting down instantly with no warning. All it says is is monitor is going to sleep. Picture goes first swiftly followed by the sound. I have no idea what is causing this at all, which is why i am posting this.

I have tried several scans, full system, utilities, cleaning registry, cleaning disks. Nothing seems to work. I know it is not overheating as i check it straight away when it shuts down and it is pretty cold still.

Does anyone have any ideas what it could be and possible solutions?

Cheers in advance, Eski.

Have u checked the windows system logs 2 see if theres any recorded errors in there? Does it shut down cleanly or does it just power off? If it jus powers off i would be lookin towards hardware failure i.e. power supply or cpu or gpu overheating. Wen does it happen, is it just wen ur gamin or puttin it under stress?

I have 2 possible solutions:

Have you switched your monitor off?

Also aids
